A Takemi Program Seminar

Economic downturn and health inequality: evidence and solutions

Thursday, March 17, 2016
3:30-5:00 pm
SPH Building 1, GHP 12th Floor Conference Room

RSVP: Amy Levin alevin@hsph.harvard.edu 617-432-0686

Naoki Kondo (Takemi Fellow, 2006-2007)

Naoki Kondo is an Associate Professor of Social Epidemiology and Public Health at the University of Tokyo. Dr Kondo is a physician who graduated from Yamanashi Medical University in Japan. After two years of clinical training, he started his carrier as an epidemiologist. Dr Kondo’s research focuses on social determinants of health and health behavior. His recent work includes longitudinal studies evaluating the effects of income inequality and economic crisis on health and health inequality. Dr Kondo has recently started more translational and interventional studies aiming to provide evidence for actions reducing health inequality. Dr Kondo is a Vice Director of the Japan Gerontological Evaluation Study (JAGES), one of the largest longitudinal epidemiologic studies in Japan, following up nearly 130 thousand community-dwelling older adults every three years since 2003. He is also the Editor-in-Chief of the Division of Health Promotion, Health Behavior, and Society in the BMC Public Health and Associate Editor of the Journal of Epidemiology.