Skipping breakfast may increase coronary heart disease risk
Researchers found that men who regularly skipped breakfast had a 27% higher risk of heart attack or death from coronary heart disease than those who ate breakfast.

New Findings in Battle Against Drug-Resistant Tuberculosis
Sarah Fortune, Melvin J. and Geraldine L. Glimcher associate professor of immunology and infectious diseases, explains in a podcast why people infected with some strains of M. tuberculosis are at very high risk of getting drug resistant TB.

Turkey fellowships give HSPH postdocs chance to teach, collaborate
Three HSPH postdoctoral researchers recently spent a week at Turkey’s Kocaeli University through a program offering them opportunities to lecture, learn, and establish academic collaborations.

Event Highlights

Hot Topics lecture series
Tuesdays, 12:30-1:20 PM
FXB G-13

July 30
Controversies in PSA Screening for Prostate Cancer
Lorelei Mucci

August 6
Born a Little Too Soon: What’s All the Fuss About Late Preterm Birth?
Michelle Williams

August 13
Water and Health: A Global Perspective
James Shine

Event calendar >

Centennial Moments

Killing off deadly diseases: Donald R. Hopkins, MPH’70
Read more Centennial Moments

Research News

New partnership between
HSPH and India builds on longstanding ties
Peter Berman, professor of the practice of global health systems and economics, is coordinating the initiative.

Medicaid expansion faces challenges
Benjamin Sommers, assistant professor of health policy and economics, explained Medicaid expansion at a recent HSPH talk.

New safety measures needed to reduce gun violence
"When there are more guns there are more deaths," David Hemenway, director of the Harvard Injury Control Research Center, said in a recent talk at the School.

Summer Music Series, Wednesdays through August 28
Concerts begin at 12:30 and alternate locations between the HMS Quad and Kresge Courtyard.

Summer City Safaris, Thursdays through August 15
Join HSPH's Ecoopportunity for lunchtime walks to local sites. For each safari, meet outside the Kresge entrance at 12:30 PM. All safaris will return by 1:30 PM.